Vessels and gods

The people who serve as vessels are like adapters for the powers of gods. If a god uses his or her powers directly in this world they could have too strong an effect on nature and human beings. They control and adjust their powers using vessels.

Also, among themselves, gods can tell by the type and size of divinity who it belongs to and how strong it is. For this reason, gods sometimes conceal their divinity inside vessels.

We call people who can speak with gods 神託 (Kan-nagi). Among them, those whose bodies gods can inhabit are called vessels. Although there are many Kan-nagi in this word, there is only a small number of vessels. People who can see or feel the presence of apparitions, ghosts, and similar beings as well as gods are said to have inspiration.
